DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-3, 5-28, 31-35, 38-46 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Rose (6,588,793).

Rose teaches an overhead airbag module housing 24 comprising a cavity; an airbag outlet; and a first sun visor attachment member for receiving a sun visor 42. The airbag can deploy between a header of a vehicle and the sun visor when the sun visor is mounted to the first sun visor attachment member, as shown in the figures. The first sun visor attachment member is positioned on the overhead airbag module housing that defines the cavity. The sun visor interconnects the first sun visor attachment member and the header. Rose teaches a second sun visor attachment member positioned rearward of the outlet, on an inboard side of the vehicle, and the first sun visor attachment is located on an outboard side of the vehicle. The first and second sun visor attachment members are located, but not part of, the cavity for containing the airbag, see figure 4. The first sun visor attachment member 72 is a resilient substrate. The substrate is a resilient steel plate. The substrate is a resilient injection molded plate (see col. 10, line 28-38). The substrate is affixed to the headliner that has a mounting flap 60. The mounting flap is a strap attachable to an A-pillar of the vehicle. The substrate is disposed between the overhead airbag module housing and the headliner. The substrate has an area sufficient to spread an actuation load when the sun visor is actuated, such that the sun visor does not become detached from or damage the headliner.

Allowable Subject Matter

3. Claims 4, 29, 30, 36, 37 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The Notice of References Cited list references disclosing some features in common with the present invention.
